STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS

The seven revolutions that are currently moulding the destiny of mankind are inter-related revolutions. Important among these revolutions is the transformation of the man-woman relationship and the establishment of equality between the two sexes. In order to make the man-woman equality a reality the human mind will have to liberate itself from many obsolete concepts which are associated with the possessive, property-conscious, male-dominated society.

The concept "illegitimacy" and the practice of tracing one's lineage solely from the father's side is one such reactionary and fossilized concept. The reactionary attitudes which form the unsplashed basis of the present official and non-official practices and decisions of the courts will have to be discarded completely if the egalitarian principles of the Constitution are to inform and elevate our social life.

In India there has been going on for the last three thousand years a conflict between the liberal attitude on the one hand and the orthodox standpoint on the other. The story of the sage Jabali is well known. This "illegitimate" son of his mother when questioned about the identity of his father pleaded ignorance, went to his mother and when informed that she could not say definitely who his father was, came back and gave a truthful account of what his mother had told him. For his fearless and truthful utterance the people of ancient India not only honoured him but canonised him as a sage. The present reactionary attitudes, therefore, are contrary to the liberal spirit to which the legend of Jabali bears witness.

The life of thousands of people and their mothers is being made miserable because of the fossilized attitudes that prevail in our society today. This Bill seeks to remove the stigma of "illegitimacy" from those thousands of unfortunate people, "illegitimate" sons and daughters of their mothers, who are being persecuted by society for no fault of theirs.
